19-21 September 2012, Ljubljana, Slovenia

The third conference of ESREA Network on Education and Learning of Older Adults (ELOA) will be held at the University of Ljubljana, Slovenia. The conference will be held at the Faculty of Arts in the centre of Ljubljana.

Conference theme

Intergenerational solidarity and older adults’ education in community

The third conference of ESREA Network on Education and Learning of Older Adults (ELOA) will be held at the University of Ljubljana, Slovenia, from the Wednesday afternoon (19th of September) to Friday evening (21st of September 2012). The conference will be held at the Faculty of Arts, University of Ljubljana, which is situated in the centre of Ljubljana.

The conference will be held in 2012, the ‘European Year of Active Ageing and Solidarity between generations’.

The current demographic trends are changing the relations between generations, and consequentially, are influencing the way citizens experience their social, economical, cultural and political lives. This state of affairs warrants stronger intergenerational ties and policies that function to reduce and abolish age segregation. Stronger intergenerational solidarity can be achieved by policies and activities encouraging a reciprocal exchange between the generations. In this context a central role is played by community education with its long traditions and influence on sustainable social development and personal growth, mutual relationships and the quality of life of members in communities. Read more of the conference theme at the conference website. You will also find the Call for Papers at the website as well as practical information of the conference.
